

Hunters V and Other Deer Camp Stories

A short history about our parents and what a difficult time they had as pioneers in a wilderness, to start farming and raising a family of ten at the same time. For us boys there could not have been a better place for a family to grow and enjoy hunting and trout fishing from the little Wolf Creek that flowed through the farm land. We were always kept busy with chores. After we were in our twenties and some of us were just newly married, four of the older brothers and a friend started a club. We called ourselves the Hunters Five, and with hunting white tailed deer in our blood, we became somewhat serious about it. Within three years, the rest of us joined, and we formed the Hunters V, Inc. We purchased a forty, with an old farm house on it that served as our hunting camp for a number of years. Well, things really got going, and after a few years we purchased a part of the family farm, wooded land, and with the brothers two farms we had over 300 + acres of good, wooded hunting land. Put eight brothers and a brother-in-law that love to hunt together and what do you get? Fun times! Stories and letters about our club, meetings, family gatherings, skits and pranks pulled on one other. These are all true stories. The names were not changed to protect the guilty. There was a buck that was shot twice and still lived; a close encounter with Fidel Castro, who turned out to be an imposter Our deer hunting opening weekend would be our super bowl of the year, but did you ever hear of a fish story that happens to be a true? Then get a load of what happened on a dark early morning in the deep woods. A fire; yes a fire. But it cast not a light? Which left the poor hunter in the dark? Twenty four hours of activities inside a hunting camp that was never, ever reported before by mankind; a ten hour play-by-play report from a hunter in a real sky box, up 22 ft. in a big old pine tree on a cold Wisconsin, November Day An exclusive, never before interview by a
